

Monthly Newsletter

Typical London Gal

Hello and welcome to my November newsletter and begun doing these newsletters this year and seen the responses on my blog site everyone can build a castle, and truly grateful.

I have filmed and uploaded my first gift guide and too see it go to Typical London gal Carrie Holmes.

I have begun creating a Parenting gift guide for my blog The Parenting Adventures tips and tricks, and wanted to do this because of prices going up I wanted to do something that parents can keep and save money where possible and

As I edit this newsletter I had a total reset day and put up my first décor I have so far. I am going to see if I can get some more bits, but so glad to have e clear out and feels like a great lift off my shoulders.

I did donate money for Children in Need and going to donate money to the Epsom RDS horse riding school where they teach school children and disabled children horse riding and yesterday my son got his Grade 1 award and is run mainly by volunteers and so going to either sponsor a pony or donate to the school, as the way it is run is lovely, they are all so friendly.

You can create your own experiences, like create a DVD night of your favourite films and create your own snacks for it and send friends an invitation rather than a gift for each, with some mulled wine, as you can buy a bottle of this and I am going to do so along with Advocate and the other thing you can do is have the old tradition have card games and who ever wins gets a surprise like they can win a box of chocolates or a booked experience.

I love playing card games at Christmas and it would be for money but it was such good fun and really was a household tradition.

The first place you can save money on is on Christmas cards, I like buying mine from Charity shops or make them, and if you shop in stores like the Works they do brilliant craft items and really for good prices and games for kids too.

This is where I purchased some of my son's birthday gifts and if you use one of their loyalty cards it allows you to get discounts, and great if your kids like books, because they are always doing good deals on them.

This is not just kids books but I have bought some books myself from there and have a great selection and I love their notebooks so I think you can guess where I will be spending some of my time in, along with looking for some great décor items and Wilkos is good too, some stores are better than others but they do still do some good festive goodies.

Plans for the rest of 2022

So with Christmas comes the new year, yet I like to get Christmas out of the way before I really plan for the new year but I start to think about my goals for the following year.

I want each year to be better than the last and so I will continue doing challenges and I am now getting my head in gear to look for gifts and get organized for Christmas, and in writing this newsletter I am creating a gift printable for parents and will go on to my blog site <http://theparentingadventurestipsandtricks.wordpress.com>

I want my book done before the end of the this year and want people joy with a hot chocolate, a cup of tea and of coffee, or out in the sun on a sun lounger you lucky so and so's, and switch off from daily life for a bit.
