

February 2024 Newsletter

I Took a break

I took a break from writing blogs at the start of 2024 because I wanted to concentrate on other areas like editing and writing books, as I am almost done with my next book I want to completed and created a new book and build my Youtube channels, and I really do like vlogging and been really good.

So soon it will be March and means Easter is on the horizon and Henry my son would have easter everyday as he loves chocolate and I know what child don't? Well I as a kid wasn't a fan and it would take ne ages to get through my eggs and I have never been able to eat a whole Mars Bar. Yet I still enjoy celebrating it.

My mum will usually do a Easter Egg hunt and I like to do different things, and one year I made my own eggs and can be really fun for you and for children. Now I am not saying I want your kitchen covered in chocolate, but like Christmas, it is good to have fun and why not have a competition, like making their own eggs and chocolate gifts, and make baskets with a toys, a small book or lucky dip. Also learning about the Easter story. I know not everyone is religious and I respect that, but those who are, it is good to have fun with family and friends to celebrate Jesus's life and let your kids decide if they believe in God and Jesus, as they develop.

Everyone to their own.

If you'd like to check out my vlogging channel on Youtube then check out this link:

<https://www.youtube.com/@typicallondongal>

There is more vlogs to come and please subscribe it will really help me in knowing what content you like.

This is the same for my blogs too and do have a few sites, check out my Pinterest where I share my posts, along with vlogs and other video content:

<https://www.youtube.com/@typicallondongal>

Celebrating Mothers Day

So it is Mothers day on the tenth of March so what makes a good Mothers day gift? Rememberable and something that they can use or have a new experience.

For my mums birthday I bought her an afternoon tea from #buyagift.com and Christmas it was a jumper from Marks and Spencers. Set a budget as remember it is not about the cost but what they are going to get out of it.

Make a list of ideas and make it personal. I like making cards and working towards getting back to in doing that again and stores like The Works have a lot of card making products or hobby craft. Create a scrapbook for them or journal and make it personal by using stickers. o if they like skincare and you know what products and brands they use can make a good gift along with make up making sure they do actually use that item and make your own gift set rather than buying one of items they you know they use.

I love a gift set but I have a lot of products to use so if they have had a declutter, then buying them new products may not be welcomed and if they have said they have enough, means they don't want more. On the other hand if they do get through products like skincare and make up a lot then it is a great gift and be very much welcomed.

Being a mum myself we take on so much, not saying dads don't hence why we have fathers day too, but men and women are different and I no some will disagree, but in my experience we can be the stirring wheel and men are the engine, they help push the car, and so lets love our mums and having a family meal can be a good gift or book a meal to document it, as they won't be around forever and like my mum, they do so much that us mums deserve that day.

